About This Bicentennial Issue of the Directory

We are featuring photos of state editorial staffs in this issue to help each of us identify the people we work with on committees and on the phone continually even though we may not have met them in person. We do not plan to do this each year, but perhaps as soon as turnover of staffs indicates it is justified.

Naturally, it was difficult to catch all staff members on campus for a photo. Since the entire staff is listed with titles for each state, we did not repeat functions in the captions, or list those who missed photos. A few states were unable to get photos taken. We appreciate your help and trust the usefulness of the directory will repay you for the effort.

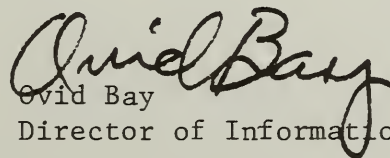

For the first time:

- We have added USDA Regional Information Offices of the Agricultural Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), Agricultural Research Service (ARS), and Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) which are part of our information network and outlets for university research and Extension educational materials and will facilitate exchange of information.

- The directory is "thinking international" with the beginning of a list of key "International Agricultural Communicators" in the closing pages. I envision an exchange of professional techniques that will help us all do a more efficient job relaying research and other information to farmers to help produce the food this world will need the next 100 years.

Using the above lists will broaden our "ag communications concept" beyond our present boundaries and benefit us all.

Our wrap-around cover picture of this 1976 issue of the directory was taken at the 1934 National AAACE Conference at the University of Minnesota.
